

Performance Methodology

- The returns for each portfolio include capital growth and income from dividends for each stock held in the portfolio.
- The overall percentage return for each portfolio is calculated by weighting the capital employed in the portfolio during the reporting period based on the number of days each stock was held, and then comparing the overall growth in the portfolio against the average weighted capital invested in the portfolio over the period.